SCHOOL DIRECTORS ELECT C. W. HAYS AS BOARD'S PRESIDENT

Succeeds Attorney F. E. Younklin Who Resigned Recently.

NEW CONTRACT WITH LIBRARY

That Institution Will Receive $2,000 Towards Its Maintenance; Chemistry Teacher Is Elected to Succeed C. C. McCall; Other Business Passed.

Charles W. Hays was elected president of the school board last night to succeed Attorney F. E. Younklin, who resigned about a week ago. Although Younklin's resignation was not accepted at the time, his persistent refusal to sign the new contract led the board to choose another presiding officer. The new contract for the year 1915-16 was approved, providing for a salary of $120, the same amount paid C. C. McCall, whose resignation went into effect last week. Mr. Hays was formerly principal of a high school in a town near Buffalo, N. Y., a graduate of Cornell and an author of two text books on chemistry. He was highly recommended for the position.

Superintendent S. E. Ashe and Principal H. B. Smith will get two trips this year, one to Harrisburg on December 27, when the State Educational Association holds its convention, and the other to Cincinnati in February for the convention of the National Educational Association. Directors H. B. Smith and S. E. Ashe were appointed delegates to the state school directors' convention at Harrisburg in February. After paying the bills for the month, the board adjourned at 10:10 P. M.

The members of the board pledged their hearty support to the new president, who declared that, while he had entered upon his duties with a certain amount of apprehension, he was confident that he would be able to carry out his duties to the satisfaction of the board and the community. He was nominated and elected.

The board did not sit until 8:15 as the members delayed proceedings until it was evident that neither Directors Younklin nor Hays would appear. A considerable amount of routine business was quickly disposed of. The contract with the Keystone Phonograph Company, to supply records to the school, was not accepted by the board because it was for a period of only one month. It was reported that the Connellsville Steam Laundry Company had taken up the work.

Teacher Fred Shaw, for the past year, has been reported to the board as being unable to perform his duties. The board reported that the new superintendent for the month had been purchased.

Superintendent Shaw of the Connellsville branch of the Citizens National Bank, has been reported to the board as being unable to perform his duties.

The board reported that the new superintendent for the month had been purchased.

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN GET FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to put on a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of malnutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be rationally supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol diet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it makes the food and turns the sugars and starches into flesh, ripens the food and builds up the blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from 10 to 25 pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by Dr. J. H. Hays, corner First and Main, A. A. Clarke, 223 North Pittsburgh street; Graham & Co., North Pittsburgh street; P. H. Harman, West Main street; West Side, H. O. Keagy, Pittsburg and Green streets; J. C. Meers, North Water street, and other good drug-gists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Autumn Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders. It should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight 10 pounds or more.—Adv.

YOUR HAIR NEEDS PARISIAN SAGE

It Quickly Removes Dandruff, Stops Falling Hair and Scalp Itch.

If your hair is full of dandruff, thin, greasy, dull and never will do up to look pretty, you can almost immediately remove the cause, making it beautiful, thick and fluffy by the use of Parisian Sage, one of the most famous and invigorating hair and scalp tonics known.

Parisian Sage not only gives your hair but stimulates the hair roots and furnishes the nourishment needed to make it grow hard, abundant and moist with life. Just one application removes every trace of dandruff and stops scalp itch—your hair becomes soft and fluffy with an incomparable gloss, beauty and charm.

You cannot be disappointed with this hair tonic and dandruff destroyer for there is nothing so good for your hair. It is easily applied at home and costs but a trifle from A. A. Clarke, or any drug counter.—Adv.

MANY AT DIXON FUNERAL

Immaculate Conception Church filled with mourners.

One of the largest funerals held from the Immaculate Conception Church in recent years was that of Joseph T. Dixon held this morning at 9:30 o'clock. The large auditorium was filled to its utmost capacity with friends and relatives of the deceased from Connellsville and more distant points. The Holy Name Society and the Young Men's Council of the church, of which the deceased was a prominent member, attended in a body.

Rev. Father John T. Burns read the mass and Rev. Father William Meix delivered the sermon. Rev. Father J. J. Grouney of St. Vincent de Paul's Church at Latrobe assisted. There was an unusually large collection of handsome floral tributes. The following Knights of Columbus served as pallbearers: M. C. O'Connor, J. L. Lowrey, Martin Gannon, John Collins, Rudolph Raisten, and Lawrence Cuneo. Interment in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Funeral of Mrs. Culp. Rev. G. L. C. Richardson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. J. L. Proudt, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiated at the funeral of Mrs. Naomi Culp held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of a sister, Mrs. Martha Cypher on North Second street, West Side. The services were impressive and were attended by many friends and relatives of the deceased. Edward Cypher, J. L. Cypher, J. A. Cypher, Harry Cypher, Benjamin Algood and David Jones served as pallbearers. Interment in Hill Grove cemetery.

Neck Broken by Blow. H. D. Stairs of Smithton, while drilling a hole for an airshaft, was almost instantly killed yesterday morning when a limb from a tree broke, striking him back of the head, breaking his neck.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of the father of the deceased, Rev. J. W. Hall will officiate. Interment in the Martin cemetery.

RHEUMA

The Standard Remedy for All Forms of Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles.

Are you suffering from some form of Rheumatism? Then you need a remedy for that disease only—not a preparation said to cure all the ills of the human body. Rubbing in liniments will only quiet the pain temporarily, but will not remove the cause.

Rheuma cleanses the kidneys of the poisonous uric acid secretions; opens the closed veins so that the healthy blood can pass along the dead matter from the entire system; regulates disordered bowels, and enables a sluggish liver to convert the blood into rich, life-giving corpuscles. When this is accomplished there is no more rheumatism, for the source of the disease will be wiped out.

Rheuma is free from dangerous drugs. During the treatment the digestive organs are not damaged—there is created a healthy appetite, and a little from A. A. Clarke or any druggist. It is inexpensive. Your money returned if it fails.—Adv.

SMITHFIELD.

SMITHFIELD, Dec. 8.—Dr. Crow of Uniontown was called here Monday to see James R. Vance, who is seriously indisposed with heart trouble. Samuel T. Galt of White House was a business visitor Monday.

M. C. Stuck was a business visitor at Uniontown Monday.

Alf O'Neill of Uniontown was calling on his trade here Monday.

Samuel Conn of the Mountain View Farm near Oakton, was a business visitor Monday.

The directors of the First National Bank held a business meeting in the bank Saturday.

Some 25 or 40 Smithfield people were in Uniontown Saturday night for the show "True to the Flag," put on there by home talent from Smithfield. They were delayed by a broken driving shaft on the engine which blocked them at Chest Haven more than a hour.

The Ladies' Aid of the M. E. Church will meet in the Sunday school room of the church Thursday, for an all-day quilting.

Alfred Rankin, operator for the Telephone Company, returned from a visit to his sister, Mrs. Frank Watson at Orient, Sunday evening.

This Monday is the eighth day that it has rained here and some are complaining and crying enough, but still we have not had enough to fill up our depleted wells, so let it rain.

W. C. Rockett, one of our oldest residents, is confined to his home with ailments incident to old age.

THE SOISSON.

"SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS."
The dramatization of Harold Bell Wright, which holds the record for the largest sales of any American work of fiction, which has been made by Mr. Wright, with the assistance of Ellsberry W. Reynolds will be seen at the Soisson Theatre tonight.

The scenes of the play are laid in the Ozark mountains of Missouri. It is a story of the hills and the simple life, yet it has plenty of excitement and an air of mystery that will hold the auditor from beginning to end.

The story has to do with the father of an artist who, tired of the life goes into the Ozarks for peace and quietude. He learns of a grievous sin committed by his son, whom he mourns as dead. The son had visited the hills some years before, when he fell in love with a simple country girl, he painted her picture and when he went back to the city, describing the girl, he earned fame because of the canvas. The girl, deserted and broke, heartbroken, dies leaving behind her a half-brother and a half-sister.

It is the home of this dead and wronged girl that the father of the artist comes, and here he is employed to watch the sheep. He grows to love the country and its people, and he and the half-brother and sister become friends. Then there is a love story running through the play that adds to its attractiveness. It is the love of a young girl of the hills for a young man, a girl of unusual qualities, and a half-brother.

HERMAN GARDNER IN "THE PRINCESS OF BAGDAD."
One of the really splendid attractions of the season is the six reel drama, "The Princess of Bagdad." It has Helen Gardner in the title role and will be produced at the Soisson Theatre tomorrow. The two reel medieval drama "The Ninety Black Doves" is a two reel feature with Maudie McQuarrie in the stellar part. The feature comedy, "The Little of the Nations" is a superlative laugh maker. The Animated Weekly has 12 good subjects. Saturday the famous play "Ten Nights in a Bar-room" will be presented.

THE COLONIAL.

"THE PILOT OF TABOUBAC."
That "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country" has always been true. Genius is usually ridiculed or ignored at home until it has been recognized abroad, then when the fame of the genius has put the place of his nativity on the map, his neighbors begin to rise up and call him blessed.

Connellsville has never been "put on the map" by genius, having depended for fame upon the generosity of Nature in storing nearly almost immeasurable wealth; but that a spark of genius has broken forth, the coming production of "The Pilot of Taboubac," Miss Florence Goldsmith's operetta, bids fair to prove it. Already the merits of this production have been so far recognized that such persons as Adolf Forster, John Gernert of Pittsburgh, J. C. O'Brien dean of the school of music of Carnegie Tech, have arranged to witness its performance here next Friday evening. Will Wentzell, who has taken first place in musical works in Greensburg, will probably be present also.

Miss Goldsmith has arranged for the publication of her work after its second trying out and further revision, and a number of propositions for its production have already been received. "The Pilot," when played here last May, was in the crude. It has since been completely revised and re-written, with the advice and criticism of prominent Pittsburgh musicians. It met with a very cordial reception upon its first production and those who profess to know predict that it will receive an ovation upon its second advent. It is an all-Connellsville work, is being presented for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. and from every standpoint is worthy of a generous patronage. The seat sale is now on at the Y. M. C. A.

THE ARCADE.

BROADWAY GIRLS.
The Broadway Girls are occupying the boards at the Arcade Theatre Monday Tuesday and Wednesday and they have some show. Two large audiences showed their approval of yesterday's performance. The show is staged in a hotel, the comedy is handled by a clever group of comedians and the chorus is exceptionally good. They change costumes several times and do ensemble work that it far above the average tabloid chorus. This show carries the most musical director accompanied by the Arcade orchestra.

The show closes with a three-reel feature "In the Duke's Power."

Half an hour passed without a word spoken by any member of the party. Each was deep in his or her own special preoccupation. Alan turned over plans for an early wedding; Rose, hugging the contentment of her situation; Judith, lost in profound melancholy; Trine, nursing his rage, working himself up to a silent fury whose consequences were to be more far-reaching than even he dreamed in his wildest moments.

His first development, for all that, was desperate enough. The next monomaniacal occupied the right-hand corner of the rear seat. Thus his one able hand was next to Judith, in close juxtaposition to the revolver in the holster on her hip. Without the least warning his left hand closed upon the weapon, withdrew it and leveled it at the back of Alan's head.

As he pulled the trigger Judith flung herself bodily upon the arm.

Even so, the bullet found a goal, though in another than the intended victim. The muscular forearm of the chauffeur recoiled.

With a shriek of pain the man released the wheel and grasped his arm.

Before Alan could move to prevent the disaster the car, running without a guiding hand, careened off a low embankment to the left and shot full tilt into a shallow ditch on the right, shelling its passengers like peas from a broken pod.

Alan calquipped a good twenty feet through the air and alighted with such force that he lay stunned for several moments.

When he came to, he found Barcus helping him to his feet; a heavy over-passenger touring car halted in the roadway indicated the manner in which his friend had arrived on the scene of the accident.

When damages were assessed it was found that none of the party had suffered seriously but the chauffeur and Seneca Trine himself. The former had only his wound to show however, while Trine lay still and senseless at a very considerable distance from the wrecked automobile.

Nothing but a barely perceptible respiration and intermittently fluttering pulse persuaded them that the flame of life was not extinct in that poor, old, palm-cracked body.

CHAPTER LIII.

The Last Trump.

Toward the evening of the third day following the motor spill, Judith sat in the deeply recessed window of a back-chamber on the second floor of a hotel situated in the heart of California's orange-growing lands.

Behind her Seneca Trine sat, apparently asleep, in a wheeled invalid chair.

There was no occupant of the room. Though he had lain nearly two days in coma, her father's subsequent progress toward recovery of his normal state had been rapid. Now, according to a council of surgeons and physicians who had been summoned to deliberate on his case, he was in a fair way to round out the average span of a sound man's lifetime. He had apparently suffered nothing in consequence of his accident more serious than prolonged unconsciousness.

For the last twenty-four hours he had been in full possession of his faculties and (for some reason impossible to Judith to fathom) uncommonly cheerful.

From this circumstance she drew a certain sense of mystified anxiety. Taken in the course of the morning she had caught his eye following her with a gleam of sardonic exultation, as though he nursed some secret of extraordinary potentialities.

And yet (she argued) it was quite impossible that he should have some fresh scheme brewing for the assassination of Alan. Not a soul had had any sort of communication with him since his recovery out the attending surgeon, a man of unimpeachable character, a meek, matured, trained nurse, and herself, Judith. Under such circumstances he simply could not have set a new conspiracy afoot.

And yet . . . She was oppressed by a great uneasiness.

Perhaps (she reasoned) the weather was responsible for this feeling, in some measure at least. The day had been unaccountably hot, a day without a breath of air. Now, as it drew toward its close, its heat seemed to become more and more oppressive even as its light was darkened by a portentous phenomenon—a vast pall of ink cloud shrouding up over the mountains to the music of distant rumblings.

Nor was this all; a considerable degree of restlessness was surely pardonable in one who, from her window, watched a carriage-drive, populous with vehicles (for the most part motor-cars) bringing to the hotel guests from the wedding of Rose Trine and Alan Law.

Within another ten minutes the man Judith loved with all her body and soul would be the husband of her sister.

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was broken; in her bosom as she sat there, watching, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the approaching thunderstorm and to the jubilant pealing of a great organ down below.

The had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the moment drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irrevocable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; unquestionably there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to await her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any snake thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door at length, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, in the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones vied with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the Law estate had vast holdings of land, the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son.

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind. With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years. Grasping the back of the wheeled chair, he used it as a crutch to guide his feeble and uncertain movements. But these became momentarily stronger and more confident.

This, then, was the secret he had huggled to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stricken motionless—strangely enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown, he strove a straight, if very deliberate, course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated the descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippers, feet, chuckling feebly to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen enemy and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the claw-like hand upon his shoulder and shrunk back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As if from the path of some grisly visitant from the world beyond the grave, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, father of the bride.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the insane, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged maniac standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to bear upon Alan's head.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land. A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliancy slashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the pistol in the hand of Seneca Trine, discharging the weapon even as it struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swooped and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Wife.

Again three days elapsed; and Judith, returning from the double funeral of her father and sister, doffed her mourning for a gown less somber and more suited to the atmosphere of a sickroom, then relieved the nurse in charge of Alan.

He remained as he had been ever since the falling of the thunderbolt—in absolute coma.

But he lived, and—or the physicians hoped—must soon regain consciousness. Knocking beside his bedside Judith prayed long and earnestly.

When she arose it was to answer a tap upon the door. She admitted Tom Barcus and suffered him to lead her into the recess of the window, where they conversed in guarded tones in spite of the fact that the subject of their communications could not possibly have heard them.

"I've come to tell you something," Barcus announced with characteristic awkwardness. "I've known it for three days—ever since the wedding in fact—and kept it to myself, not knowing whether I ought to tell you yet or not."

He paused, eyeing her uncertainly, unhappily.

"I am prepared," Judith assured him calmly.

"You're nothing of the sort," he countered, argumentative. "You couldn't be. It's the most amazing thing imaginable. . . . See here . . ."

"You understand, don't you, that Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably, "you see, he loved her so—I thought—I'm sure it would be best—if you can bring yourself to it—to let him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed, but Judith. And that's skating so close to the truth that it makes no difference: the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely as though she and not Rose had been killed."

After a long pause, the girl asked him quietly: "I understand. But is it possible you don't understand that, if I were to consent to this proposition, and myself to a deception which I must maintain through all my life to come—Alan would consider me his wife?"

"Well, but—you see—you are his wife. . . . Oh, don't think I'm off my bat. I'm telling you the plain, unvarnished truth. You are Alan's wife. . . . No, listen to me. You remember that day in New York when you substituted for Rose, when Alan tried to elope with her, and you went with him to Jersey City, and stood up to be married by a preacher-guy named Wright—and Marrophat broke in just at the critical moment and busted up the party?"

"Well," she demanded breathlessly, Barcus produced a folded yellow paper from his coat pocket and proffered it.

"Read that. It was handed to me as best man, just before the ceremony. Seeing it was addressed to Alan and knowing he was in no frame of mind to be bothered by telegrams, I slipped it into my pocket and forgot all about it temporarily. When I came to find it, I took the liberty of reading it. But read it for yourself."

The typewritten lines of the long message blurred and ran together almost indecipherably in Judith's vision. None the less, she contrived to grasp the substance of its meaning.

"TITTY, DIDN'T YOU WIRE ME SOONER? IT WAS: 'MARRIAGE TO ROSE IMPOSSIBLE. REV. MR. WRIGHT INFORMED ME YOUR MARRIAGE TO JUDITH LAST WEEK HAD GONE TOO FAR WHEN MARROPHAT INTERRUPTED. JUDITH LEGALLY YOUR WIFE. WOULD HAVE ADVISED YOU SOONER HAD YOU LET ME KNOW WHERE TO ADDRESS YOU. HOPE TO HEAVEN THIS GETS TO YOU BEFORE TOO LATE.'"

The message was signed with the name of Alan's confidential man of business in New York.

When Judith looked up she was alone in the room, but for the silent patient on his couch.

Slowly, almost fearfully, she crept to his bedside and stood looking down into the face of her husband.

And while she looked Alan's features quivered, his respiration quickened, a faint color crept into his pallid cheeks—and his eyes opened wide and looked into hers.

His lips moved and breathed a word of recognition:

"Judith!"

With a low cry of tenderness, the girl sank to her knees and encircled his head with her arms.

"Judith," she whispered, hiding her face in his bosom, "Judith is no more . . ."

A pause; and then the feeble voice: "Then, if I was mistaken, if you aren't Judith, you must be Rose—my wife!"

She said steadily: "I am your wife." His hands fumbled with her face, closed upon her cheeks, lifted her head until her eyes must look into his.

And for many minutes he held her so, looking deep into the soul of the woman.

Then quietly he said: "I know . . ."

THE END.

YOU MAKE FRIENDS BY RECOMMENDING A RELIABLE KIDNEY MEDICINE

Your representative called at my door yesterday morning to leave a sample bottle of your famous Swamp-Root and I am certainly pleased to see anybody connected with the firm who makes a medicine which has done so much for me and my family. A few years ago I was suffering from a terrible pain in my back and when I was up and around the house I had to walk with my body bent nearly double. If you had placed a thousand dollars above my head I could not straighten up to get it.

Heard of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root I sent to get for a sample bottle and more suited to the effects of that small amount I was sure it would help me so I bought one bottle and it has cured me.

Shortly after that my husband who was a coal miner, was suffering from kidney trouble and could not work and I sent for some of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. He was in a terrible condition, but as the doctors had not given me any relief, I had more faith in Swamp-Root and it was felt founded, for it did the work and after taking a few bottles he was completely cured.

I daily recommended the use of Swamp-Root to my friends and neighbors.

Sincerely yours,

If you do she stands just ten votes better chance of securing the Sellers Kitcheneed Junior Special Kitchen Cabinet. And you certainly want that little daughter or little girl friend to have such a thoroughly delightful thing for a child to possess.

If you have given her your name and she has received her 10 vote stamp for her book, recommend to some of your friends who are looking longingly toward the ownership of a Kitchen Cabinet that they give their names to your little protege.

Then, if you or your friends buy a Sellers Kitcheneed Kitchen Cabinet during the sale, each such purchase will mean 100 more votes for the youngster.

Now, if you have any intention whatever of owning a Kitchen Cabinet, right now offers every motive and incentive for doing so during this contest.

You know probably that a Sellers Kitcheneed more nearly meets all the requirements of a Kitchen Cabinet than any other on the market. Read over these features and remember that the Junior Special is identically the same as the Kitcheneed Special in smaller sizes of every thing.
